The mention of Sulphur will recall to many of us the early days when our nothers and grandmothers gave us our saily dose of sulphur and molasses every suring and fall.

It was the universal spring and fall "blood purifier," tonic and cure-all, and mind you, this old-fashioned remedy was not without merit.

The idea was good, but the remedy was crude and unpalatable, and a large quantity had to be taken to get any effect.

Nowadays we get all the beneficial effects of sulphur in a palatable, concentrated form, so that a single grain is far more effective than a tablespoonful of the crude sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment between these the best sulphur.

In recent years, research and experiment have proven that the best sulphur for medicinal use is that obtained from Calcium Calcium Sulphide) and sold in drug stores under the name of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. They are small chocolate-coated pellets and contain the active medicinal principle of sulphur in a highly concentrated, effective form.

Few people are aware of the value of this form of sulphur in restoring and maintaining bodily vigor and health; sulphur acts directly on the liver, and exercitory organs and purifies and enriches the blood by the prompt elimination of waste material.

Our grandmothers new this when they dosed us with sulphur and moluses every spring and fall, but the cradity and impurity of ordinary flowers of sulphur were often worse than the disease, and cannot compare with the modern concentrated preparations of sulphur, of which Stuart's Calcium Wafers is undoubtedly the best and most widely used.

They are the natural antidote for liver and kidney troubles and cure constipation and numity the blood in a way that often surprises patient and physician alike.

Dr. R. M. Wilkins, while experimenting with sulphur remedies soon found that the sulphur from Calcium was superior to any other form. He says: "For liver, kidney and blood troubles, especially when resulting from constipation or malaria. I have been surprised at the results obtained from Stuart's Calcium Wafers, in patients suffering from boils and pimples and even deep-scated carbuncles, I have repeasedly seen them dry up and disappear in four or five days, leaving the skin clear and smooth. Although Stuart's Calcium Wafers is a proprietary article, and so'd by druggists, and for that reason inboode by many physicians, yet I know of nothing so safe and reliable for constipation. liver and kidney troubles and expecially in all forms of skin diseases as this remedy.

INSURANCE COMPANY DEFEATS LABGE CLAIM.

PECIAL BY CABLE TO THE ST. LOUIS RE-FUBLIC AND THE NEW YORK HERALD. don, Nov. 12.—(Copyright, 1994.)—An sting insurance case was decided this week, when an English company in the King's Bench Division, successfully resisted a claim for $1,000 on a life policy made by the widow of John Jewesbury made by the widow of John Jewesbury. A Birmingham jury had found that Jewesbury had correctly answered all questions put to him when insuring his life, but the Lord Chief Justice, on appeal, decided that the contrary was the case, and found for the company was the case, and found for the company but granted a stay of execution pending further appeal.

Jewesbury had told the company he had never met with an accident. Some time after insuring he had a fall while in a Turkish bath and sustained a burn from the tiled floor. Blood polyoning set in and proved fatal. It was then found he had been the vicilm of two previous accidents. In 1901 he fell while in a theater and sprained a thumb, and in 1908 he slipped on a banana skin in the street, as the result of which he suffered from water on the knee for fire weeks.

As neither of these accidents had been disclosed, the company refused payment.

What Sulphur Dees AMBITION OF MRS. FAIRBANKS SPUR TO HUSBAND'S ASPIRATIONS

Her Desire for Social Leadership Potent Influence on Senator in Seeking Vice Presidency-Counselor and Adviser, She Assists Him in Conducting His Campaign-Character Sketch of Woman Who Is to Become "Second Lady of the Land."

MRS. CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS, Wife of the Vice President Elect.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 12-The election of Senator Fairbanks to the vice presilency and the increased duties and higher social position that Mrs. Fairbanks and members of the family will assume in consequence have caused much interest to center in the wife of the Vice President elect here and throughout the country as well, if thourands of congratulatory let ters and telegrams which she has received are to be regarded as evidence, Nor is Mrs. Fairbanks wholly unmind ful of the distinction which the election of the Senator to the vice presidency has brought to herself and her family. She played an important part in influencing the Senator to accept the nomination, and at no time did she attempt to conceal her desire that the honor should come to him. Of the two, indeed, Mrs. Fairbanksels more ambitious for honor and power. She is fond of society and she recognized the fact that it would be a distinct rocial gain to her to return to Washington as the wife of the Vice President. A close friend of the family said some time ago that she was very anxious for the Senator to accept the party nomination and wishes when, though not seeking the nomination, he gave his friends to understand that he would not refuse it.

NO RESPECTER OF PERSONS Mrs. Fairbanks has long been known here for her freedom from ostentation and at the same time for her natural elegance. She is no respecter of persons, but treats all with courtesy and consider-elegance. She is no respecter of persons, but treats all with courtesy and consideration.

While possessing a fine instinct for the best in human nature and a certain shrewdness in her judgments of men and women, Mrs. Fairbanks has an artiessness and a childlike naivete that render her especially charming in her home and among her children. She enjoys their full confidence to a degree seldom entertained by a mother.

She meets her children as she does her friends, on the grounds of equality, never depreciating the slightest remark that is made, and by her inviting manner woolng each one to do his best.

But, while democratic in a rare degree in her manners, she is always careful and dignified, but her dignity is softened by a tact which is always at her command. She exercises a commanding influence in her home, and this influence extends to her husband in all matters political. He has great respect for her judgment and she is a counselor as well as wife. All of his public speeches are said to be first submitted to her, and her advice is asked on important points. Nor do the criticisms fall heedlessly. Manuscripts are revised if Mrs. Fairbanks so advises. The Senator makes it a practice to read his speeches to his wife in the quiet of the home library, and if passed upon favorably they are delivered to the larger audiences in the Senate or en the political platform.

HOSPITALITY FIRST LAW.

HOSPITALITY FIRST LAW. While Mrs. Fairbanks cannot be called a domestic woman in the sense of person ally superintending her home, she presides at the head of a well-ordered house, where hospitality is the first law. A housekeeper is in charge, and she is made responsible for the corps of well-trained servants, after er the fashion observed in large English establishments. establishments.

Mrs. Fairbanks is a very busy woman, her enormous mail making heavy demands on her time, aside from multitudinous so-her enormous mail making heavy demands on her time, aside from multitudinous social duties.

The question of dress cannot be said to be an all-absorbing one. Always dressed in good taste, Mrs. Fairbanks renders her gowns in keeping with her position rather than as a matter of superlative importance. New modes and latest fashion wrinkles trouble her not at all, nor will she consent to being made uncomfortable by modes that hamper. Certain limitations she sets for her dreasmakers; otherwise they are at full liberty to make her gowns as handsome and becoming as their ability permits. White is a favorite color.

Mrs. Fairbanks is the mother of five chilldren—Mrs. John W. Timmens, Warren C., Frederick C., Elchard M. and Robert—and all have been reared under the immediate attention of mother.

No society demand upon her was ever sufficient to cause her to take one moment from her children when they needed her attention, and they have grown up remarkably like the mother, kind, affable and popular. One of the striking characteristics of the family circle is the respect and confidence in and for each that have been manifested in a thousand ways that have failen under the observation

The relations existing between Mrs. Fairbanks and her children have been the subject of surprise and admiration to the few that knew of the ideal family life, kept sacred from the public gaze. Only those admitted to the inner family circle have seen the dignified Senator and the brilliant society woman unbend in the privary of their home to become companions of their children in the evening hour.

PRESIDENT OF D A R Mrs. Fairbanks is president of the D. A. R. and as such has a vast amount of correspondence to look after and many details of business to consider. She is very methodical in her work, setting aside cermethodical in her work, setting aside certain hours for it and accomplishing all that she lays out for the definite time, for she permits nothing to interfere with her self-allotted tasks.

Except as a speaker at D. A. R. conventions. Mrs. Fairbanks has appeared in a public address but once, and that was in this city a few days ago.

"It was of interest Concerning Washington, D. C.," was the subject of an address which she delivered before a large andience at the First Presbyterian Church in this city a few evenings ago. It was a recital of some of her experiences in Washington, and proved an all-enjoyable treat to her auditors. The address will be repeated soon for the benefit of the First Baptist Church building fund.

Mrs. Fairbanks was asked this evening for some expression regarding her social claus. Washington its wint and claus at Washington this wint as Mrs. Fairbanks was asked this evening for some expression regarding her social plans at Washington this winter.

"Indeed," she replied. "I have made no plans whatever for the winter. We will occupy our present home in Washington, but I cannot say what social duties I will have to discharge. Perhaps, I would not care to anticipate them eyen if I knew what my social duties would be."

The Secretary stated that he expected to look over the papers to-night, but that it would be impossible to go deeply into the case until after his annual report was ready for the President.

Secretary Taft naturally realizes the importance of the bridge case, and says he does not care to puss upon it hurriedly. If, therefore, he does not find time before hit genature to thoroughly examine the briefs filed, he will take the papers with him and determine the matter before his return, in which event his decision will not be announced until after the party arrives in Washington.

The Secretary's party will remain in Panama about a week if the present plan is not changed returning to Washington the first week of December.

The judges awarded three Shaw gold medals, each having a value of $5 and awarded for a species or variety of plant of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce and introduced to such commerce by the exhibitor during the present year.

The Baby Rambler, a climbing rose of magnificent coloring and fragrance and a plant of good habits, exhibited by the Vaughn Seed Company, was awarded a Shaw medal.

The two new ferns, the Scotti and Piersoni Tarrytown fern, each were awarded a Shaw medal. The Piersoni is a beautiful plum fern of dwarf habit, suitable for house culture. The Scotti is similar to the Boston fern, but of dwarf character, which makes it more desirable as a house plant.
